Zocalo Community Development Named One of Metro Denver's Best Places to Work by Denver Business Journal

DENVER, Colo. – Zocalo Community Development was ranked third in the Denver Business Journal's 2018 Best Place to Work awards for companies between 25 and 49 employees.

"We have built Zocalo as a company on a mission to transform the real estate industry into a force for good," said Susan Maxwell, principal and chief operating officer for the company. "The most important way we do that is through our people. We aim to foster a culture that allows our employees to build relationships, collaborate and bring innovative ideas to life. This award really demonstrates the talented, dedicated and caring individuals who make Zocalo what it is."

The awards recognize companies in the Denver area that provide excellent workplace environments and engage their teams. Winners are selected based on the results of an employee engagement survey that measures 10 key categories. They include team effectiveness, trust in senior leaders, feeling valued, manager effectiveness, compensation and benefits. To gather statistically sound results, companies must reach a minimum level of employee participation — based on total number of employees — to be eligible to be named a finalist.

Zocalo received the award at an event on June 20 and was featured alongside other winners and finalists in the paper on Friday, June 22. Subscribers can view Zocalo's profile in the paper here.

About Zocalo Community Development

Zocalo Community Development is a next-generation real estate company, joining social purpose with profitability to create places of enduring economic value, social connection and exemplary environmental standards. We focus on projects and locations where demand for green, mixed-use, mixed-income development outstrips supply and public policy favors affordable, planet-friendly projects that help residents achieve their aspirations. Zocalo's capabilities include residential development ranging from affordable and workforce housing, to luxury rental and for-sale residences, to large format mixed-use developments and full-scale construction management.
