

Susan Maxwell of Zocalo Community Development Recognized as Denver Power Women 2018 Honoree

DENVER, Colo. (Nov. 19, 2018) – Susan Maxwell, principal and chief operating officer for Zocalo Community Development, will be recognized as an honoree at Bisnow’s Denver Power Women 2018 event on December 5. The event celebrates Denver’s most influential female leaders in business and commercial real estate.

“Being recognized as a pioneer for the female leaders of tomorrow is an incredible honor that I am truly thankful to receive,” said Maxwell. “It has been my personal mission to provide all of Zocalo’s employees with a road map to ensure they have access to leadership connections, equal pay and mentorship programs, especially the junior women within our company.”

In her role as chief operating officer, Maxwell supports and executes the vision of Zocalo’s chief executive officer, David Zucker, while overseeing the company’s corporate and property operations. She leads interior design, common area uses, and branding and marketing for Zocalo’s new developments. Maxwell is integral in the acquisition and development planning for the company’s future developments and works directly with equity partners.

In addition to honoring each leader, the Denver Power Women 2018 event will address some of the biggest issues facing women in business and commercial real estate. Tickets are available online at <https://www.bisnow.com/events/denver/denver-power-women-2292>.

About Zocalo Community Development

Zocalo Community Development is a next-generation real estate company, joining social purpose with profitability to create places of enduring economic value, social connection and exemplary environmental standards. We focus on projects and locations where demand for green, mixed-use, mixed-income development outstrips supply and public policy favors affordable, planet-friendly projects that help residents achieve their aspirations. Zocalo’s capabilities include residential development ranging from affordable and workforce housing, to luxury rental and for-sale residences, to large format mixed-use developments and full-scale construction management. Learn more at www.zocalodevelopment.com.